

North Yankton Robbery Part 1

In the year 2004, Michael de Santa, Trevor Philips and Brad Snider robbed a bank located in Lundendorff, North Yankton. While Trevor locked up several hostages in a room, Michael put two sticky bombs on both the vault doors, and then set them alight. When the sticky bombs blew up, Michael and Trevor went in the room that contained the money and stole just under $18,000 while Brad was making their escape plan. When the crew made their escape, Michael was held at gunpoint by a security guard. Michael advised the guard to forget what he saw and leave, but Trevor shot him dead. While the trio exited the bank, little did they know that there was a crowd of the local S.W.A.T. team and police officers waiting for them outside the building. When the trio finally exited the bank, all the cops started shooting, forcing the crew to go back into the bank and exit through the back instead. Their chances of escaping were very low, because the vehicle they were using was at the front of the bank, so Brad risked his life and went to the front of the bank and started shooting the gas tanks of the police cars. One by one, they all blew up and made a path way so they quickly went past and got inside their car and drove away. The S.W.A.T. trucks started following them. Agent Dave Norton was aiming and shot Michael's car wheels. While Michael was driving past a train crossing, he got hit by a passing freight train and hit a nearby tree. Luckily the crew survived. The trio then didn't have an escape vehicle. Trevor suggested that they used their getaway chopper, but Brad insisted that they stick to their plan and continue on foot. Brad couldn't help but hear a broke man doubting himself. The man said:

"Oh, I wish I could rob a bank or something and be rich but I don't have a crew"

So, Brad thought for a while and said "Hey, mate! You could join our crew."

"Really?" said the broke man.

"For sure!" said Brad. "But we have to find you a cool name. How about Cooper?"

"Yeah! That sounds good." So from that day on, the crew was known as the North Yankton Watch Dogs. Cooper wasn't really a broke man wanting some money. He was actually an undercover cop. The next day, Brad and Trevor showed Cooper everything like the getaway chopper base and what crime they were going to do next and where it was going to be held. So Cooper knew everything, and was going to go back and tell the other cops the information he'd just received. A week later, the NYWD went to Legendary Car Dealership and stole three getaway vehicles. They were all bulletproof. By the time the cops got to the dealership, NYWD we're already gone. Now that they had an escape vehicle, all they needed was an escape plan, but Cooper didn't know about the escape plan. The next day, they went to steal some weapons and armour so they would be ready for any gunfights. The guns they bought were an SMG ASSAULT RIFLE, MACHINE PISTOL, CARBINE RIFLE an ASSAULT RIFLE and HEAVY SHOTGUN. So then they were all ready for the next mission.
